Just a line or two to let you know how I feel about the microsoft case. Microsoft is one of the biggest holdings in many people's 401k, Ira.s, etc. Since the start of the anti-trust case the value of the stock has dropped. At a time when you want people to be less depended on social security and max out on their 401k plans, and keep up their IRA.s, you not only go after microsoft but also attack the many people who looked to the company for financial security, through their retirement plans. Ease up, and the stock could possibly rise restoring people's confidence not only in MSFT, but the stock market in general. Thanks.
